Wholesale Coffee Prices Heading Up Across Nation

from lower supplies from Castro-dominated Cuba and weather damage to European sugar crops, while demand held at high levels. Now, coffee supplies in the world market (the U.S. grows none of the beans) are shrinking because of a blight that last year began reducing crops in Brazil. Also, reducing crops in Brazil. Also, a frost damaged part of Bra-

The study sees " a bright future ahead" for beverage and food containers made of glass and virtually all other types of glass containers, as a result of the steady growth in the pub-lic's demand for glass containers.

Shipments of new glass bottles and jars in '64 will increase approximately 7 per cent over the 1963 record level of 25.8 billion units, the study prepared for the Glass Con-tainer Manufacturers Institute predicts. Biggest gains are ex-pected in non-returnable beer and soft-drink bottles, the newest glass containers that have been rapidly winning consumer favor.

Looking ahead to 1966, the study estimates that shipments of non-returnable beer bottles will reach 5.2 billion units for a gain of 59 per cent over 1962. By the same date, shipments of non-returnable bottles for soft drinks are expected to reach 775 million units, an increase of 64 per cent.

MORE IN '64 — Increasing appreciation of the U. S. public for California wines will make 1964 a record-setting year, says Bernard Wiernik, president of two of the nation's leading win.

Coffee prices are heading upward. And, as was the case last year with another widely consumed commodity — sugar — the basic cause is outside the U.S. and pretty much beyond the control of the nation's food industry and government.

Last week saw most leading coffee processors post an increase, at the wholesale level, of four cents a pound. It was the second broad increase after half a decade of stable prices enjoyed by the American consumer.
